SOUTH LANGHORNE GIRL SCOUT TO BE HONORED TONIGHT

Miss Doris Hickey, 14, To Be Given Award By National Girl Scout Council

TO RECEIVE MEDAL

Quick Action Resulted In Saving Life of Boy Aged Eight

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Apr. 24—Miss Doris Hickey, a 14-year-old member of South Langhorne Girl Scout Troop, No. 1, is to be signally honored this evening, when she will be presented with a medal for bravery, exhibited when by her quick thinking and action in an emergency, she saved the life of Arthur Braun, aged eight, of Woodland avenue, this borough.

The medal, an honorable mention award from the National Girl Scout Council, will be bestowed upon Doris at the annual Mother and Daughter banquet of the local Girl Scout Troop, to be served at Flanery's Restaurant, here, on the occasion of the troop's 14th anniversary.

Doris is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Hickey, and the award for saving the life of the Braun lad was recommended to the National Council by the Philadelphia Girl Scout Council.

It was last October 4th, that Doris, standing at the rear of her home, saw the boy running across a nearby lot, his clothes aflame. Grabbing a rug from a neighbor's rear yard as she ran, Doris overcame the boy and wrapped the rug about his body, smothering the flames. The boy was taken to Abington Hospital where he remained until early January. The Braun boy, with other children, it is said, had been playing with matches and kerosene. The Braun child, who lives near the Hickeys, was visiting two doors from Doris' home, when the incident occurred. Arthur plans to attend the banquet and see the girl who saved his life signally honored.

Doris, who is much interested in first aid work, plans to train as a nurse upon graduation from Langhorne-Middletown high school in 1944.

The award will be presented by Mrs. Edwin J. Halliwell, Jenkintown, president of the Girl Scout Leaders' Association.

Eighty places are reserved for the banquet, and among the guests who will speak are: Miss Miriam Sperbeck, of Highland Park senior troop, who will tell of her experiences at the Western Hemisphere Encampment for Girl Scouts and Guides, held at Camp Andree, N. Y., and Mrs. George Miller, Philadelphia, a member of the North-east District Girl Scout Council, Philadelphia.

Others invited as guests to the affair are Miss Marie Pedersen, Cornwells Heights, the Bucks County Girl Scout Council.

Report U. S. May Convoys Half Way

Ottawa, Apr. 24—Canadian Government circles today buzzed with unconfirmed reports that the U. S. Government is planning to use naval craft in convoy duty half way across the Atlantic.

The rumors circulated following the disclosure that the plans of the Canada-U. S. Permanent Joint Defense Board call for a projection of the North American defense line to a point 1,000 miles at sea.

Greek and British Defenses Cracking

Berlin, Apr. 24—Greek and British defenses north of Athens were reported cracking today as mechanized German legions rolled steadily toward the Greek capital and sent advance squads as far forward as the city's outskirts.

There were local clashes between land units, but German authorities declared the entire picture in Greece now is similar to the scenes of disintegration witnessed in the other nations which have been overrun by the German blitzkrieg.

Chief action, these quarters said, was a struggle by shattered British expeditionary forces to escape the German Luftwaffe units which ranged southeast along the Greek coast to prevent the British from getting away.

German authorities said the action has narrowed down to an aerial hunt for the British at embarkation spots where the "remnants" of the B. E. F. are attempting to board transport vessels.

As soon as the German planes spot these points, it was stated, land units race to engage the British. These land forces usually find a British rear guard in a cliff-like canyon designed to withstand attacks while the main bodies of troops attempt to escape, it was stated.

North of Athens, authoritative quarters said, the military picture is confused. This region was described as dotted by scattered Greek army units which frequently capitulate piecemeal as soon as they are reached by German Panzer forces.

Washington, April 23.
IN an effort so vast as that entailed in our program to aid the British and build up our own defense, it is, of course, unreasonable to expect complete competency. Waste, mistakes, and a certain amount of floundering are a fairly inevitable.

NO fair-minded man would criticize this Administration for falling short of the highest efficiency, nor complain about blunders due to pressure for speed and the complicated problems inherent in the construction of a great war machine. None but a fool would expect perfection. Nevertheless, there is a difference between the mistakes that plainly arise from a

SOLDIER FROM BRISTOL FLIES EAST IN BOMBER

James Roe Volunteered In February; Is Located In Denver, Col.

STUDIES PHOTOGRAPHY

Private James Roe, one of the young men leaving Bristol as a U. S. Army volunteer on February 15th, is back home for a visit—thrilled with his opportunity of flying East on a huge Army bomber; pleased with army life in general; eight pounds heavier; and with a fine tan.

It was the bomber trip that made it possible for Roe to pay a three-day visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Roe, 205 Buckley street; and upon leaving Mitchell Field, L. I., Sunday morning, he will fly to Florida, possibly remaining there two weeks, then return to Denver, Colorado, where he is located at Lowry Field.

Roe was one of approximately a dozen young men who flew on one of the B-18-A bombers, one of the largest types flown by the United States Army, they making the trip from Denver to Dayton, O. then to Bolling Field, Washington, D. C. He arrived in Bristol yesterday, and will join the bomber crew Saturday evening at Mitchell Field, for the trip South, starting Sunday morning.

For a month after his induction, Roe was located at Fort Meade, Md.; then assigned to Lowry Field, Denver, where he has been enjoying life in the line barracks for the past six weeks. He is a member of the 33rd Squad Squadron, U. S. Army Air Corps, and as soon as there is an opening he will study photography. He is of the opinion that it was his interest in photography, plus some experience he had had in that line, that gave the much-sought opportunity of being assigned to the air corps. As soon as there is an opening in the school at Lowry Field, Roe will enter photographic classes there for 14 weeks. He then has hopes of being assigned either to Trinidad, off the coast of South America; or to Hawaii.

Many soldiers located at Denver make requests to take trips on the bombers whenever there is opportunity. "There are not as many trips east, and I feel lucky that I had the opportunity," said Roe today in telling of his experiences. "We left Lowry Field on Tuesday at eight a. m., and reached Dayton, O., after seven hours flying time. We remained overnight in Dayton, leaving Wednesday morning at nine and reaching Bolling Field, Washington, at 11 a. m. For most of the distance we flew at 9,000 feet." The bomber will leave the nation's capital tomorrow morning for New York. The entire trip will consume approximately three weeks.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

Washington, April 23.
IN an effort so vast as that entailed in our program to aid the British and build up our own defense, it is, of course, unreasonable to expect complete competency. Waste, mistakes, and a certain amount of floundering are a fairly inevitable.

THE first kind can be rectified as the machine matures and experience accumulates. But the other kind cannot be corrected except by changing the mind of the man who makes the policy—in this case, Mr. Roosevelt—and that is not easy to do. The best illustration is in the Administration attitude toward the strikes which still loom as the greatest handicap to the defense effort. Acquiring him of any design to help the labor leaders use the emergency for their own purposes, it is difficult to understand how Mr. Roosevelt can be unaware that his present labor policy is calculated to promote discord and slow down his program.

LET'S review the record. The President last year declared that no labor laws were to be modified.

Five trustees of the American Legion Home Association were re-elected for terms of three years at the meeting of the Albert R. Atkinson, Jr., Post, No. 210, American Legion, Doylestown, Monday evening. They include Captain Daniel D. Atkinson, John Morris, Harmon Y. Cope, David J. Windholz and Paul E. Mills.

Attended by about 40 members, the meeting was in charge of Commander Daniel D. Atkinson, who at the opening of the meeting called upon William A. May, chairman of the membership committee, for a report. The latter announced a paid-up membership of 177 which is far in advance of the corresponding period last year.

John Foster, of Newtown, who has become well known as an artist, gave an interesting talk on art at the meeting of the Newtown Parent-Teacher Association in the high school auditorium, here, this week.

Speaking before approximately 50 persons, Mr. Foster dealt with the history and development of painting from 2400 B. C. until the present. He also displayed a large number of paintings, some of them by well known American painters.

Installation of recently-elected officers and the appointment of department chairmen took place at a special meeting of the Buckingham Junior Women's Club in the headquarters of the Midway Fire Company, at Lahaska, on Monday.

The induction ceremony was in charge of Mrs. John B. Middleton, the senior advisor. Officers installed were as follows: President, Mrs. John P. Arnold; vice-president, Miss Dorothy Elliott; recording secretary, Miss Frieda Schmidt; corresponding secretary, Mrs. James Fancee, and treasurer, Miss Hazel McCaughey.

BILL MERGING BUCKS AND NORTHAMPTON COUNTIES DEFEATED

Senator Howard I. James Appears Before Committee and Makes Statement

THE VOTE WAS 8 TO 4

Stockham and Yeakel Introduce Bill to Maintain Canal

By International News Service

HARRISBURG, Apr. 24—The proposed senatorial reapportionment bill of Senator Joseph Ziesenheim (R), Erie, which would merge Bucks and Northampton counties into a single district and give Allegheny County an additional senator, was killed in Senate Committee yesterday by a vote of 8 to 4.

According to the bill the reapportionment would have been carried out on the basis of the 1940 census. Provisions of the Bill would have become effective at the 1942 General Election but Senators re-elected in 1940 would have served until their terms expired in 1944. The Constitution provides that the State's 67 counties must be represented by 50 senators.

Senator Howard I. James, Bristol attorney and Bucks county Senator, and chairman of the Executive Nominations Committee, made a lengthy statement to members of the Senatorial Apportionment Committee just prior to the defeat of the bill. The statement was made public. Prior to his appearance, before the committee of which he was not a member, Senator James privately had expressed his disapproval of the Ziesenheim measure.

Because of the committee vote against the apportionment measure it is believed that there will be no legislation for reapportionment at the present session.

Honorable Howard I. James, Senator from Bucks County, has introduced a bill to establish an additional State highway route in the Borough of Sellersville. This proposed route will begin at a point on Route No. 69016 at the intersection of Lawn avenue and Noble street, continuing along Lawn avenue to a point on Route No. 69104 at the intersection of Lawn avenue and Maple avenue.

Representatives Thomas B. Stockham and Wilson Yeakel, Bucks County, have introduced a bill to appropriate $50,000 for the maintenance and improvement of the State Park comprising the old Delaware Canal property which was taken over by the State several years ago and is now under the control of the State Department of Forests and Waters.

WAR ECONOMY

Regardless of what may be said in Washington or elsewhere about arming to preserve the peace, the whole policy is shaped on a war basis. If the country were engaged in a declared war, it could do little more than it is doing now to mobilize its economy—its business structure—on a war basis.

The leniency shown to outright profiteers in 1917-18 seems to have inspired a general determination to make the most of the war economy's openings for better prices for services and goods. Wages are up, and the shortage of skilled workers in some lines has put such a premium on their services that they are receiving two or even three times the normal pay for their work. The labor cost of munitions seems to be sure to increase as strikes are settled and inducements are offered to assure continuity of operation.

Older farmers are convinced that they were cheated during the world war. They point to government price-fixing of wheat and other farm products at a time when the demand was so great that the market justified prices nearly double the fixed price. They have persuaded Congress to increase the loan and parity allowance for the next fiscal year to about $1,750,000,000, which is about $500,000,000 above this year's grant.

Thus as manufacturing profits are being held down by taxes, other costs are increasing. The cry is to pass profiteering around. It is the old drive to make money out of war. The fact that mass groups as well as others will profit this time does not change the essential frailty of the war economy.

It is built on a war foundation, and it will collapse when the foundation is knocked down under it.

WIELDING THE CARVING KNIFE

Harassed cartographers, perhaps the most over-worked profession in the war, must again get out their calipers and their compasses, their slide rules and their T-squares, and poise their pencils for a redrawing of boundaries in what was once Yugoslavia. In twelve days the Nazi war machine overwhelmed an army of a million men and reduced to pulp a nation stuck together by the Versailles treaty.

Disappearance seems to be the inevitable fate of Yugoslavia. At least five countries want a slice—Germany, Italy, Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria. When these are dished out, what remains will be either nothing at all or a fragment without any real autonomy.

Nor can the fear be dismissed that this is not the last act of the Balkan tragedy. The Greeks and British admitted are in dire straits. With Hitler throwing a million men into the attack the world must be prepared for possible collapse of the allied defense in Greece.

It is futile to try to explain away the seriousness of such an outcome to the Balkan campaign. The new front that was supposed to favor British strategy has proved a mirage. Soon there may be no front at all, except that of Germany on the Ionian, Mediterranean and Aegean Seas. Only British naval power will retain any control of that area.

Now, if ever, the brass hats of United States armed forces should admit that the balance of power in modern warfare hinges on superiority in the air. That much has been demonstrated beyond all doubt.

"THE GORGON'S MASK" by Van Wyck Mason

SYNOPSIS

To the very rim of the Shanghai-Tientsin-Hongkong Far East war threat zone goes Capt. Hugh North to work "on the inside" for peace in the guise of Howard Nevins, big game hunter. Within the hour of his arrival at Honolulu, he is warned via "phone" by a woman's voice to return to the States. That night he attends a gay party tendered by Abner Polk, wealthy American. Alluring Phedre Renore, hostess; Baron von Rentner, German industrialist; and Hideyo Kanamura, Japanese merchant, attract North's special attention. The party reaches a grim end when the corpse of an unknown nude beauty comes in on the tide to the gayly illuminated float. North makes an interesting post-mortem discovery.

Later he exonerates Coast Artillery Lieut. Wilson Clark for neglect of duty. The latter is now describing undeclared-war-zone activities of a mysterious Transpacific Company.

CHAPTER SEVEN

"But to get on with the story: this Transpacific Company, an American corporation, made a great fuss about reopening; their manager hired hundreds of coolies, brought in machinery and mining experts, and generally put the Talingho property back in condition."

"Just a minute, Lieutenant," North interjected from the midst of his mental calculations. "Did this purchase take place after Japan created Manchukuo as a buffer state—or before?"

"After, sir."

"Thank you. I think I remember the later developments." Meditatively joining his fingertips, the intelligence captain went on: "No sooner had the Transpacific got well settled in Talingho than this bandit marshal, Wang Tso Kin, began raiding into Sino-Japanese territory. Strange coincidence—eh?"

"That's right," Clark eagerly agreed. "When Wang got chased by the Japanese, he retreated towards the Transpacific property, though there was a much easier route about five miles to the north of the mine."

"It does give one pause," North remarked, "almost as much as to know why old Wang, after retreating over seventy-five miles direct to Talingho, decided to dig in just beyond the Transpacific property?"

"It was a neat piece of work on somebody's part," Lieutenant Clark observed. "Old Wang so disposed his troops that the Japanese commander had to post his on the Transpacific property or be wiped out. Remember what happened?"

A moment Captain North delved into some mental archive, then looked up, his eyes narrowed a little.

"Seems to me that when the Japs tried to take possession of the hill, American employees raised our flag and warned them off; then when the Japs persisted, they opened up with machine guns."

"In fact," cut in Clark, "the Transpacific mine guards knocked off about fifty of the attackers."

The intelligence captain frowned a little. "It took a clever man—one above the average—to think that out."

"Yes, sir. But that wasn't the real damage. When the Japs fell back, Wang's crowd promptly took advantage of the opportunity to stage an offensive of their own. In fact, Captain, the bandits caught the Jap force in the flank and so cut 'em to kybobs, and of course Tokyo didn't like that a bit."

The speaker paused to slip a mosquito that lit on his wrist. "G-2 came into it because about a dozen American mine guards got shot during the row; American property had been invaded, Americans killed defending it, and all that."

Captain North began to pace back and forth while Clark, apparently eager to reinstate himself in his superior's good graces, hurried on with his account.

"The Japs of course sent out more troops immediately, drove Wang into the hills, and all was quiet till the end of April—the twentieth, I think."

"The twentieth—is that exact?"

"Yes, sir. That was when this second offensive of Wang Tso Kin's began. As you know, the Japs shelled the Chinese position yesterday, and in doing so had to fire on the Transpacific property."

The intelligence captain's lips formed a noiseless whistle, then changed the subject with, "Where are autopsies generally held in Honolulu?"

"At the Tripler General, sir—Dr. Thaxter's the coroner," Clark said earnestly. "And—well, I—I hope you'll let me help you, sir—I've—"

Abruptly, North, folding his arms, looked the other in the eyes until they wavered and sought the floor.

"Do you think I ought to? Do you realize what this idiotic infatuation of yours has cost G-2? Here's the Department faced with the worst crisis the country's had since 1918, and you"—his condemnation was utterly impersonal, and wholly withering—"you neglect your duty, spend your days and nights boating, picnicking, and chasing some girl."

"And now," North announced, "I've reached a decision. I'm not going to recommend you for dismissal. I've done plenty of fool things myself—though nothing on a par with this—so I know what it is to be young. There's still plenty of time for you to get over this nonsense."

"Thank you, sir!" Clark burst out. "I'll never be able to tell you how grateful I am, and I—I'll work to the limit!"

"Right! But on the mainland—not here." Captain North paused by the window and looked out into the light-filled darkness where the Aloha tower, faintly gilded by the city's glare, dominated Honolulu. "You're going aboard the liner that sails for San Francisco at eleven-thirty tonight."

"Tonight?" Lieutenant Clark's white-clad body stiffened, and his eyes became two brown pools of misery. "Why—why—but I can't go tonight."

"You can, and will." Utterly final was North's tone. "I won't run the risk of having you see that Stefan woman again. I'm out to beat her and I don't want you"—he was deliberately brutal now in an effort to arouse his subordinate from his daze—"to go blabbing to her about my plans. See to it," he added sharply, "that you take that boat tonight. I suppose you can be trusted to do that?"

In China "the mine guards opened up with machine guns," explained Lieutenant Clark. "They knocked off about fifty attackers."

Lieutenant Clark's erect body sagged a little on its seat when North inquired, "What was the reaction here in Honolulu?"

"I—I don't know, sir. I was away on a trip. But the evening papers said that seven more Americans had been killed."

Again a strained silence fell on the bedroom, until North asked: "Well, what about this so-called 'friendly visit' of the Japanese Scout Squadron I heard them talking about on the mainland?"

"Due in two days, sir," Clark said in a flat, sad voice. "Six cruisers, an airplane carrier, and a flotilla of twelve submarines. Everyone on the island is afraid of trouble, but you see how it is?"

"How what is, Lieutenant?"

"Why, if either government calls off this visit, the other will interpret it as an unfriendly gesture."

"I see. If the Japs don't show up, then our own jingos will say it shows bad faith and will assume that a declaration of war is imminent; and on the other hand, if Washington asks the Japanese admiral to postpone his visit, Japan will have it that the United States is about to declare war. It's an ugly mess, at any event."

Hugh North checked his restless parade by the open window to gaze out at palm tops which, in the pale moonlight, seemed to have been coated with frost. . . . Did Japan want war?

"Outside of rumors that there will be trouble, do you know of anything specific?" queried North, suddenly fixing his subordinate with grim and searching eyes.

"No," Clark replied with a return of his early suppleness. "But the feeling is so strong that lots of men are sending their wives and children to the other side of the island till the Jap-fleet pulls out."

Defense Situation In County Is Considered

of the court house, here, last evening, at which time the defense situation in the county was considered.

William L. Stackhouse, Bucks county sheriff, and former fire marshal of the county, presided; with Moses Coyle, Point Pleasant, president-elect of the Bucks County Firemen's Association, serving as secretary.

Approximately nine months ago an emergency committee was set up by the county firemen's association, to arrange for co-operation among the companies, looking toward fire defense of the county. At last night's meeting, the consensus of opinion was that the situation as regards fire defense "is well in hand."

The firemen discussed the locating in the county of new industrial plants; the type of buildings being erected by the companies; the matter of fire protection for same, etc.

It was stated there are at least two new fire engines on order by companies in the county.

A number of companies are experiencing difficulty in securing sufficient men to answer alarms, due to the fact that so many men have gone into industry, and many others are now in army service.

One company alone, Chalfont, has lost services of 10 members temporarily, due to that number being called through selective service.

Several companies from the lower part of the county have lost the help of members, through employment or army service, and the great need of gaining active interest of older men or other young men in the companies is seen.

The Bristol Consolidated Department has also lost the services of 15 men through that number going into military training.

The firemen made additional plans for a testimonial dinner to be tendered the retiring president of the county organization, James E. Groome, of Yardley, in June.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE

Paddled by Paul Muni, Laird Cregar, John Sutton and a group of Indians, a fleet of birch bark canoes brought bales of furs into the 17th Century port of Montreal, Canada, built for a scene in "Hudson's Bay," which stars Muni at the Bristol Theatre. . . . And the water on which they were paddling has a tradition of its own.

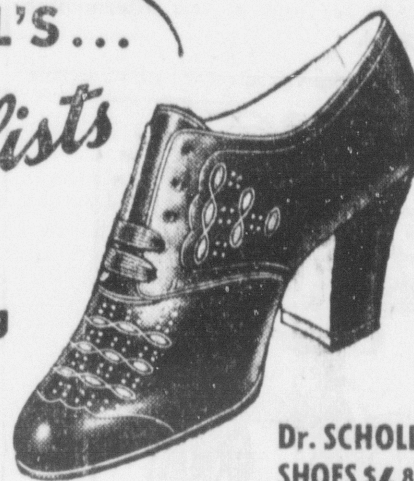

Just three years ago, 20th Century-Fox acquired about 100 extra acres as part of the expansion program for its vast film production facilities. On this acreage they dredged a huge lake of 125,000 square feet.

RITZ THEATRE

"Little Men," now at the Ritz Theatre, the well-loved Louisa M. Alcott story of a New England school in the period following the Civil War, has been lavishly produced for modern theatregoers, in the RKO Radio version revolving about the career of an orphaned youngster, his foster-father and his experiences at the Plumfield school.

BENSALEM GIRLS WIN 2ND STRAIGHT GAME OF SEASON

Home Run Off Bat of Eleanor Hughes Settles Pitching
Duel

FINAL SCORE IS 1 TO 0

Grace Van Horn and Alma
Deans Hurl Great Battle

SOUTHAMPTON, Apr. 24—A home run from the bat of Eleanor Hughes settled a pitching duel between Grace VanHorn and Alma Deans here yesterday as the Bensalem High School girls won their second straight 1941 game and their ninth straight in two years in Lower Bucks County League softball competition. Hughes' four-bagger was the only run scored in the tilt.

It marked the first setback of the season for the Greyhounds who only last week had trounced Richboro by the overwhelming score of 38-5 and then had conquered Buckingham, 17-4. Incidentally, Southampton has not defeated Bensalem in four seasons of softball competition.

The contest was a hurling duel from start to finish with neither team scoring a run until the sixth when Hughes, a junior at the Owl institution, slammed a Deans' pitch to deep right field for a homer. It was Hughes' only hit of the game.

VanHorn gave up but a pair of hits to the Southampton team, a double by Emma Deans and a single by Young. She fanned five batters and issued but one pass. She was backed by excellent support, an error by Doyle, marring an errorless game. Despite her ragged help from her mates who committed seven errors, Alma Deans did well on the mound, especially in the pinches. She was picked for nine hits, three of which went to Dot Doyle who connected for a double and a pair of singles.

Bensalem will face New Hope next week on the latter's field. New Hope is among the leaders of the circuit.

SOFTBALL LEAGUE NEEDS THREE TEAMS

An important meeting of the Bristol Softball League will be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the Knights of Columbus home, Radcliffe street. According to President Daniel DiLorenzo, three openings in the circuit must be filled or the league will operate with nine teams and instead of two divisions there will be but one. Games will be played every night in the week.

The teams entered in the loop and their managers are as follows: Hunters, Tony DiBlassio; P. O. S. of A., Lester Shire; Profy's, Raymond Nichols; Fifth Ward, Pat Caspecci; Grun-dy's, Kryan Kervick; Franklin, Michael LaSalle; K. of C. Jack Gavegan; Diamond Sporting Goods, Joseph Diamanti; Cornwells, Raymond Osbourne.

The league officials consist of: President, Daniel DiLorenzo; vice-president, James Pettit; secretary, Al Cordisco; and treasurer, Albert Lippincott. The arbitration board is composed of: Thomas Juno, Henry Morgan and Walter Miller.

The circuit will also attempt to book games with outside teams on open nights in the schedule.

Scout lone troop consultant; and Mrs. Warren Bilger, South Langhorne, who was instrumental in organizing the troop here.

Miss Dorothy Knox, leader of Troop 61 for the past five years, recently received a 10-day scholarship to the Girl Scout training camp, "Edith Macy," in New York, from the Eastern Montgomery County District Committee. This was in recognition of years of outstanding service in Scouting. The assistant leaders of the troop are: Mrs. Anna Patrick, South Langhorne; and Mrs. Lewis Goll, Hulmeville.

A feature at the banquet will be the presentation of a scholarship to the Girl Scout Camp Indian Run, which will be given to one member of the troop by the Langhorne Lions Club. The recipient will be announced at the banquet. Motion pictures of camp life will also be shown by Miss Agnes Clothier, of the Girl Scout staff, in Philadelphia.

During the month the leaders of the troop registered their first senior troop, it being given the number 380. The membership of the new senior troop is 13; and of the intermediate troop, 20.
